Importance & Scope:

Rising rates of depression and suicide are among the most obvious signs of the increase in mental illness resulting from the economic crisis in Spain. According to WHO around two million people in Spain with mental illness do not receive any mental health care. Untreated mental illness can mean reduced employment, family breakdown, homelessness and suicide. The burden extends beyond the individual to family and friends. Neuropsychiatric disorders are the second cause of disability-adjusted life years (DALYs) in Europe and account for 19%, with only 4% after cardiovascular disorders. About 27% of the adult population had experienced at least one of a series of mental disorders which includes problems arising from substance use, psychosis, depression, anxiety and eating disorders. Mental illness affects people of all ages, with a significant impact on many young people. [Source: Ref1, Ref2]

Every seven years a survey is done in Europe to measure the number of people who have different types of mental health problem. [Source: Ref3]

Why Barcelona?

Barcelona is the 2nd largest city of Spain it is one of the world's leading tourist, economic, and cultural-sports centers, and its influence in commerce, education, entertainment, media, fashion, science, and the arts all contribute to its status as one of the world's major global cities. In 2012 Barcelona had a GDP of $170 billion; it is leading Spain on both employment and GDP per capita change. In 2009 the city was ranked Europe's third and one of the world's most successful as a city brand. In the same year the city was ranked Europe's fourth best city for business and fastest improving European city.

Europe is considered as the second largest region for psychiatry research market. Most prominent among these is the University of Barcelona it is a world-renowned research and teaching institution with campuses around the city. Barcelona is also home to the Polytechnic University of Catalonia, and the newer Pompeu Fabra University. World Psychiatry Associations and European Psychiatric Association are the two major Psychiatric associations in Spain. Presence of psychotherapy association like British Association for Counseling and Psychotherapy, British Psychoanalytic Council and United Kingdom Council for Psychotherapy drives the market growth.
