Why San Francisco?

San Francisco, officially the City and County of San Francisco, is the 4th most populous city in California and the 12th most populous city in the United States, with a 2008 estimated population of 808,977. The only consolidated city-county in California, it encompasses a land area of 46.7 square miles (121 km²) on the northern end of the San Francisco Peninsula.

The city is also a principal banking and finance center, and the home to more than 30 international financial institutions, helping to make San Francisco 18th place in the world's top producing cities, 9th in the United States, and 15th place in the top twenty Global Financial Centers. San Francisco is unique in that a few of its parks and nearly all of its beaches within city limits form part of the regional Golden Gate National Recreation Area, which is one of the most visited units of the National Park system in the United States, with over 13 million visitors a year. It is also one of the largest urban parks in the world.

Why to Attend???

A nursing conference is an opportunity to meet others within speciality to network and to learn the latest clinical information. It is an opportunity no nurse should overlook. I've always embraced the opportunity to attend nursing conferences and have made a point to encourage others to attend whenever the opportunity arises.

Nursing conferences allow nurses of all levels of experience to participate in an area of career and education growth that is not easily found within the structure of the workplace.

Some nurses, especially those working at the bedside, may not see the significance of attending a conference. All too often the floor/bedside nurse believes that conferences are only for management, while others may think that spending one or more days not earning a paycheck may not outweigh the opportunity to clock in some additional overtime. There may be a whole host of other reasons why a nurse would prefer to remain home rather than attending a conference. Despite the plentiful excuses (the top two being cost and time), the benefits far outweigh the costs.
