About Melbourne

Melbourne is a city, and metropolitan borough of Greater Melbourne, in Australia, with a population of 4,442,918 in 2014. It lies within the Australia continent second most populous urban area, with a population of 2.55 million and third-most populous metropolitan area. The local authority is Melbourne City Council.

Melbourne is the perfect place to indulge a love of culture. Don't miss the year-round programme of special exhibitions of art, photography and design at the great Ocean road, Yarraavalley, Gippsland. Melbourne has an Australian National Academy, opera and dance scene, and is home to a number of large performance venues. For 11 million people living within 50 miles of the City of Melbourne, it is the place where they come to work, or to shop or to visit the many attractions and entertainments which only a large dynamic city such as this could hope to offer.

Melbourne is synonymous with shopping, and for decades the city has had the reputation of being Australia's shopping capital. Whatever your taste and budget, Melbourne's speciality shops throughout the charming laneways and arcades in heart of the city will have just what you are looking for.

The city has leading department stores such as David Jones and Myers in numerous shopping Centres throughout the city. In the city Centre the numerous arcades and lanes are home to shops offering the latest in fashion names, designer labels, boutique chic and any number of specialty goods.

Melbourne's diverse ethnic mix is evident in the variety of cuisines available in the food halls that are an integral part of modern shopping Centre's. The biggest food hall in Melbourne is located at the Queen Victoria Market, where the specialty is fish straight from the boat to your plate.
