About London

The presence of universities, hospitals, legal/accounting and other professional services, together with key installations of the U.K. make it favorite destination for scientific meetings. London is a leading global city in the arts, commerce, education, finance, healthcare, media, professional services, research and development, tourism, and transport.

The London economy is dominated by four major sectors: oil/gas and related activities, tourism, the port and ship/boat building, and aerospace manufacturing. Boasting attractions such as its magnetic French Quarter and river-boat gambling, London has a history of solid tourist trade. In a city with more than 10 million visitors annually, the hospitality business supplies more than 66,000 jobs in the service sector such as accommodations and restaurants. In 2010, tourists spent $6.9 billion in London.
