About Barcelona

Barcelona is capital city of Catalonia in the Kingdom of Spain. It is the second most population about 1.65 million within city limits and largest metropolitan city on the Mediterranean Sea which is located between the mouths of the rivers on the coast part of Llobregat and Besos and on the west, bounded by the Serra de Collserola mountain range. The city itself renowned as jewels of home-grown Catalan architecture, modernisme with contemporary architecture, treasures of the ancient Roman and medieval city, River side beaches and park

Barcelona has leaped from 22nd to 7th spot in the list of 468 European cities with the best economic opportunities; it ranks the 19th & 10th most competitive city in the world and Europe respectively. Barcelona is just not a city, its brand on its own league by being the 6th among the most recognized city worldwide and placing 10th in the global rankings in terms of receiving new business investments. It also proves its mettle in field of scientific research by reserving the 11th & 5th spot in terms of scientific production globally and home continent basis.

As per as the latest ICCA (International Congress and Convention Association) ranking, the Catalan capital ranks fifth globally in terms of the number of conventions and congresses it hosts annually, it is favourite among many major multinationals, who choose the city for their product showcasing and professional events.

The climate in this Mediterranean city, its coastline, its wide variety of options for culture, leisure and shopping, its creative, and its avant-garde spirit give Barcelona a special lifestyle that makes it unique.

Barcelona has an old heritage in business tourism. Its exotic cultural offering, along with a bunch of other attraction such as connectivity and aesthetics, makes the city a unique destination for business as well as for recreation.
