Market Analysis

Nursing is a health-care career that helps people recover from illness. They are self-contained and have a limited scope of practise. In hospitals, they act as a backbone, collaborating with all members of the healthcare team to provide the care that each patient demands. Nurses provide support to patients and their families as they work to overcome their illnesses. They serve as educators for the entire community, educating individuals and groups how to improve or maintain their health.

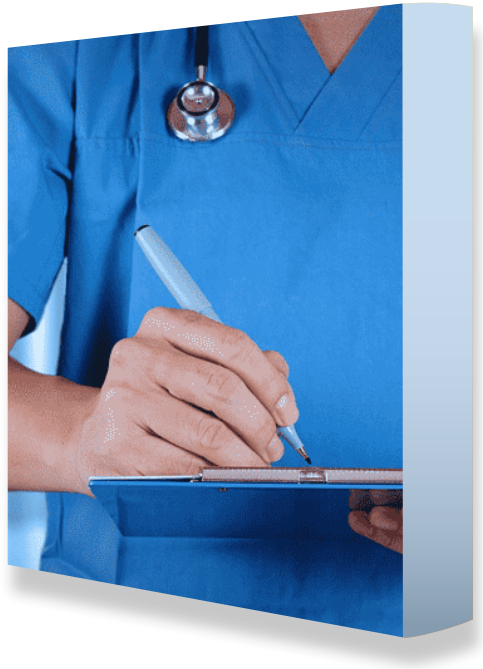

Nursing positions include medical practitioners, doctoral-level researchers, and physician assistants, to name a few.

Nurses are health-care professionals who give specialised, one-on-one care to their patients. Registered nurses are also in high demand; according to research, employment of registered nurses is predicted to grow by 22% from 2017 to 2027, far faster than the national average.
