MARKET ANALYSIS

The global public health and healthcare market has experienced strong growth since 2015, accelerated by the COVID-19 pandemic's push for telemedicine, infrastructure, and preventive care. Key drivers include population growth, aging demographics, rising chronic diseases, and advancements in digital health and AI. By 2030, telemedicine is projected to grow at 25% CAGR, AI-driven diagnostics will be mainstream, and public-private health partnerships will expand, with a strong focus on mental health, elderly care, and health equity.
