MARKET ANALYSIS

As indicated by the late statistics report, complications of Chronic Kidney Disease are experienced by about 26 million middle-aged people apart from young and old people, and a large number of others are at increased risk. Medical expenses per person increase from $15,000 in stage 3 to $28,000 in stage 4 to more than $70,000 in stage 5 each year with kidney disease. Medicare has consistently spent nearly $28.6 billion on treating people with a kidney disorders. About 26 million adults, apart from young and old people, suffer from concerns about chronic kidney disease, and millions of others are at increased risk, according to recent statistics research. The number of kidney transplants continues to be very high, and around 15,000 kidney transplants happen in 2015 alone. For research work, the National Kidney Foundation has received more than $100 million. The US spent $41 billion or 17 percent of its Medicare spending plan on people with kidney disease each year. The amount of kidney transplants continues to be high and there are around 35000 in 2017 alone. Nephrological work has earned an annual subsidy of more than $5 billion across the globe as one of the main fields of internal medicine. About $560 million is spent annually on kidney ailments alone due to the rapid increase in the risk of kidney disease.
