MARKET ANALYSIS

Wound care involves treating injuries affecting the skin and underlying tissues, with the goal of promoting healing, preventing infection, and reducing scarring. The global wound healing market is set to grow from $20.8 billion in 2022 to $27.2 billion by 2027, with a 5.4% annual growth rate. Advanced wound dressings, like foam, antimicrobial, and alginate dressings, held a significant share in 2021 due to increased demand. Dubai offers numerous advantages for hosting a wound care conference, including its central location, top-notch infrastructure, world-class conference facilities, cultural attractions, quality accommodations, and medical education. North America dominated the market in 2020 and is expected to maintain its lead. Europe is growing due to an aging population and chronic diseases. The Asia-Pacific market is projected to grow by 7.2%, and Latin America by 5.50%. Key players in the wound care product industry, including Smith & Nephew, 3M Health Care, and Coloplast, compete based on product quality, pricing, innovation, and distribution. Dubai's reputation as a global medical and scientific hub makes it an excellent choice for the 2nd Global Conference on Advanced Wound Care and Wound Management, fostering innovative ideas and solutions in wound care.
