Market Analysis

The global market for nephrology and urology devices was worth USD 4.34 billion in 2020, and it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 6.6 percent between 2021 and 2028.The key drivers of market expansion are the growing senior population as well as the increasing incidence and prevalence of chronic kidney disease (CKD). According to the National Kidney Foundation's estimations, CKD affects 10.0 percent of the global population. As a result, as the target population expands, so does overall product demand. Diabetes and high blood pressure (hypertension) are two of the leading causes of kidney failure, and the rising global prevalence of these disorders is fueling market expansion. Diabetes is responsible for 38.4 percent of kidney failures, while high blood pressure is responsible for 25%, according to the American Kidney Fund.

Furthermore, the market is likely to be fueled by the growing geriatric population, which is particularly vulnerable to ailments such as kidney and urinary disorders. According to the WHO, the worldwide population of people aged 65 and over is anticipated to increase from 7% in 2000 to 16% in 2050. One of the most significant risk factors for the development of numerous medical disorders is advanced age. Aging also impairs the immune system, increasing a patient's susceptibility to a variety of maladies such as kidney disease, diabetes, prostate cancer, and urinary retention. Urinary illnesses are the third most common issue among the elderly, accounting for nearly 47 percent of physician visits, according to the American Society of Nephrology.

About City and Venue

Barcelona is the capital of Spain's autonomous community of Catalonia and the country's second most populous city, with 1.6 million people living inside its administrative boundaries. With a population of roughly 4.7 million people, it is the European Union's seventh-most populated urban area, behind Paris, London, Madrid, the Ruhr area, Berlin, and Milan. It is the Mediterranean Sea's greatest metropolis, situated on the coast between the mouths of the rivers Llobregat and Bess, and limited to the west by the Serra de Collserola mountain range, whose highest point is at 512 metres (1,680 feet).
