Market Analysis

The global central nervous system therapeutic market size was valued at 116.2 billion in 2020 and is expected to expand at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 7.4% from 2021 to 2028. Advancements in diagnostics and therapeutics of central nervous system (CNS) diseases are expected to increase the treatment rate globally. Moreover, the increasing prevalence of central nervous system disorders and the rising demand for effective therapeutics options are expected to boost market growth over the forecast years. According to a report published by the WHO, central nervous system disorders such as Alzheimer's disease, multiple sclerosis, epilepsy, Parkinson's disease, and stroke affect more than 1 billion people worldwide. The high unmet medical need has led all the major pharmaceutical companies to invest and develop novel therapies for the treatment of CNS diseases. The CNS therapeutics market has experienced extensive R&D efforts in the past decade, which have resulted in the introduction of novel drug-delivery systems. The advancements in drug-delivery systems are expected to enhance the adoption of a novel therapy to treat central nervous system diseases. These novel drug-delivery systems have an edge over conventional methods owing to its reduced adverse effects, ease of delivery and availability of different dosage forms. For instance, the introduction of transdermal patches for CNS disorders provides an accurate amount of medicine and relief, mostly for around 24 hours.
