MARKET ANALYSIS

The central nervous system (CNS) therapeutics market was valued at USD 95,583.08 million in 2021, and it is expected to reach USD 142,088.02 million by 2027, registering a CAGR of 7.41% during the forecast period (2022-2027).

With the increasing number of COVID-19 cases worldwide, healthcare services diverted all resources toward patients suffering from COVID-19 disease. Although COVID-19 severely affects the respiratory system, it has been reported to have effects on central and peripheral systems.

One of the most severe consequences in COVID-19 patients is hypoxia or anoxia, harm to the neurological system, especially in individuals with severely reduced O₂ saturation.

At the same time, fifty SARS-CoV-2 infected confirmed cases with neurological symptoms were detected in a medical center in Chicago within 45 days of the initial phase of the pandemic.

Thirty of the patients experienced encephalopathy, which was their initial symptom.

Additionally, clinical trials on the repurposing of anti-depressants for COVID-19 have increased during the pandemic phase, and this is expected to have a considerable impact on the CNS therapeutics market.

Such studies are expected to have a significant impact on the market.

ABOUT VENUE

The city of London is the capital of the United Kingdom. It is both one of the world's oldest and most cosmopolitan cities, with a history spanning over two millennia. It is not just the country's largest metropolis, but also its economic, transportation, and cultural hub. By 1800, London's population had surpassed one million. It grew to 6.5 million people a century later. London is located in south-eastern England, 50 miles (80 kilometers) upstream from the Thames's estuary on the North Sea. The metropolis may be seen compactly in a Green Belt of open countryside in satellite pictures, with its main ring route (the M25 motorway) looped around it at a radius of around 20 miles (30 kilometers) from the city center. The growth of the built-up area was halted by strict town planning controls in the mid-1950s. The top sightseeing places in London are Buckingham Palace, St. Paul's Cathedral, London Eye, Westminster Abbey, Tower Bridge, British Museum. London, UK.
