Market Analysis

PULSUS
WWW.PULSUSCONFERENCE.COM

Growth in the dermatology market is expected to accelerate in coming years due to a confluence of factors including an aging population, rising disposable incomes, and increased health insurance coverage. Due to the positive outlook and unmet demand, the industry has undergone impressive growth and consolidation, largely driven by private equity. The market is currently characterized by high fragmentation, growing volumes, and high multiples.

The dermatology market is mainly divided into three different segments; General, Cosmetic and Mohs surgery. Of these, general dermatology is the largest segment by revenue as it includes the greatest variety of diseases and treatments.

The global skincare market is fast growing and expansive, ranging from cosmetic products to over-the-counter drugs, to prescription drugs. The global dermatology market (OTC and prescription) is vast and evolving quickly with forecasts that indicate a global market of €81.9 billion in 2028, growing significantly from €44.1 billion in 2018. The cosmetic skincare market size was valued at €130 billion in 2016.

Geographically, the Medical Aesthetics Market is segmented into North America (the US and Canada), Europe (Germany, the UK, France, and the Rest of Europe), Asia Pacific (Japan, China, India, South Korea, and the Rest of Asia Pacific), and the Rest of the World (Latin America, the Middle East, and Africa).

North America is likely to account for the largest share of the global Medical Aesthetics Market in 2020. The huge share of this region in the global market can be credited to the developing procedural volume for aesthetic procedures and the high adoption rate of novel advances in this region.

Asia-Pacific is the fastest growing region. Factors, such as the huge population base and rising disposable income, are expected to drive the market for aesthetic devices in the region.
