Market Analysis

We aspire and expect the Endocrinology 2021 theme to inspire several people all around the world, research avenues, and look forward to discussing ideas, findings, and synergies, in this International Conference which is going to be held in Italy on October 18-19, 2021.

The demand for endocrine testing increases due to the maturing incidences of endocrine disorders such as hyperthyroidism and adrenal insufficiency. The swelling diabetic, geriatric and obese population worldwide is expected to promote market growth. Furthermore, amplifying healthcare awareness among individuals coupled with increasing government support is expected to increase the diagnosis at an early, thereby contributing to the growth of the endocrine testing market.

According to the findings of the International Diabetes Conference, someone dies from diabetes or its complications every seven seconds. The majority of the deaths occur in people under the age of 60. The prevalence of diabetes has increased more rapidly in developing countries.

Diabetes is projected to grow to 9.9% of the global population by 2045. In 2017, a population of 424.9 million people with diabetes would rise to 48 percent or about 628.6 million people. Statistically, half of all deaths from hyperglycemia occur before the age of 70.

By the end of 2021, Italy's diabetes product market is estimated to be worth USD 1.42 billion. For the period 2016-2021, the market is expected to expand at a CAGR of nearly 6.29 percent.

In the present situation, North America is the most dominant region, with the United States responsible for more than one-third of the global market share. Europe follows North America. Europe is the world's second-largest market for diabetes products. This can be due to the region's rapidly aging population. Due to developments in the APAC and Latin American regions, this growth is expected to saturate in the future. In terms of market share, these economies are projected to surpass Europe.

About City and Venue

Rome is now one of the world's most important tourist destinations. Due to the incalculable immensity of its archaeological and art riches, as well as the elegance of its unique customs, the beauty of its panoramic views, and the majesty of its majestic "villas,"

After Paris, Rome is the second most visited city in the EU, with an average of 7–10 million visitors per year, which can double during holy years. According to a new survey, the Colosseum (4 million tourists) and the Vatican Museums (4.2 million tourists) are the 39th and 37th most visited places in the world, respectively.

In 2005, the city received 19.5 million foreign visitors, a 22.1 percent improvement over 2001. In 2006, 6.03 million foreign tourists visited Rome, putting it in the eighth position among the world's 150 most visited cities.

Over the past two centuries, Rome has been one of the world's most visited cities. Rome was the most powerful city in Western Civilization during the Roman period, controlling the Mediterranean, Northern Africa, England, and parts of the Middle East. Since the pope, the head of the Roman Catholic Church, lived and still lives in Rome, it became one of the most important cities in Christianity.
