Market Analysis

Dementia is one of the most major causes of dependencies and disabilities among older people. Dementia is not particular disease but which designates the different symptoms. According to WHO 47.5 million people have dementia and every year 7.7 million new cases are appearing. By 2030 total cases of dementia is projected to be 75.6 million and almost triple by 2050 to 135.5 million. Alzheimer's disease contributes 60-70 % of cases in dementia and second most common condition of dementia is vascular dementia which contributes 20% of cases all over the world. Total estimated cost of dementia is 818 billion US $ in 2015.

Dementia has overall economic impact of £26.3 billion in UK and $157 billion in USA annually. Overall death rate in world due to dementia, Finland has highest death rate i.e. 53.77 % and in other countries high rate of dementia such as United States, United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and lowest in Republic of Suriname.

Ireland is one of top four countries having highest death rate due to dementia, in Ireland percentage is 34.08%. In Ireland roughly 41,470 individuals are probably going to have dementia, albeit many have never been analysed. There are around 3,583 Irish individuals with early onset dementia. In Ireland there are around 700 individuals with Down syndrome, so joining these numbers with the individuals who have early onset dementia implies that there are around 4,283 individuals in Ireland with this bizarre uncommon type of early onset dementia. . By 2036 the estimated patient count will be 103,998.

General cost of dementia in Ireland was over €1.69 billion a year in 2012. In Ireland, the normal cost per individual with dementia is assessed at €40,500 per annum, 48% of which is inferable from casual care gave by family and companions to those living with dementia in the group. A further 43% is used for residential long stay care. At the point when the figures were extrapolated from per individual expenses to add up to societal costs, a figure of around €2.31 billion was inferred for the yearly cost of care of all patients with dementia.

About City

Dublin is the capital and greatest city of Ireland at mouth of river Liffey. The city is recorded by the Globalization and World Cities Research Network (GaWC) as a global city, with a positioning of "Alpha-", which places it among the main thirty urban areas on the planet. The vast majority of Dublin's most notable architecture dates from 18th century, such as the Four Courts and the Custom House. Temple Bar and Grafton Street are two of the few remaining areas that were not affected by the wave of Georgian reconstruction and maintained their medieval character. Dublin is full of surprising moments where precious memories last a lifetime.
