Market Analysis

In the process of evolution, the body of organisms has developed the property of distinguishing “self” and “nonself”, the “self” is accepted and “nonself” is rejected or degraded. For the rejection or degradation of “nonself”, organisms’ body has evolved a remarkably versatile defence system called immune system that operates via various mechanisms, which are collectively grouped under the name immunity or resistance (defence).The immunity or resistance (defence) is, therefore, the insusceptibility of the body to the effect of “nonself” factors like pathogenic microorganisms and their toxins and other kinds of foreign substances. The Latin term immunises, meaning “exempt” is the source of the term immunity, the English world. The branch of biology that deals with immunity or resistance are called immunology. The immunity operation by the immune system of an organism’s body against the “nonself” is called an immune response, which can be considered to perform two interrelated functions: recognition and response. Recognition is highly specific and distinguishes one foreign pathogen from the other.Immunology got recognition as a science in 1880 when the world witnessed a spate of progress brought about by the work of Louis Pasteur, who was studying with cholera bacterium, Pasteur had succeeded in culturing this bacterium and had shown that chickens developed cholera when the cultured bacteria were injected into them.
