MARKET ANALYSIS

According to a report published on September 2022, it is mentioned that the market size of the global plant extract is averaged to be valued at USD 34.4 billion in 2022 and is aimed to reach USD 61.5 billion by 2027 setting down a CAGR of 12.3% with regard to the value. In recent times, the modern population is getting even more health responsive leading to an increase in the market of alternative medicine and therapies since more population started developing belief and trust in natural products. Technology has occupied the world in such a way that the processing of plants and herbs takes place automatically without any human help. Technological innovations help in providing the answers and solutions for meeting human demand as much required. Various projects in Europe assist in the development of medicinal plant extract, one of the examples include utilizing robotics in agriculture such as employing a robotic herb harvester in Denmark. Also, the transforming minds of modern people have led to increasing demands for natural flavours has led to an increase in the demand of medicinal plant extracts.

The government of various countries is trying to make people understand and realize the importance of natural products. As a result of this effort, in present times many manufacturers are looking to sell various medicinal plant extracts in all the formats applicable and are currently now investing in R&D. In the year 2021, The Ministry of AYUSH, Government of India, accomplished a scheme supporting market-oriented farming of precedencing medicinal plants in a defined sector/area. The Ministry of AYUSH is providing support to the farmers by cultivating medicinal plants in a farmer's land with the support of providing subsidies for 140 medicinal plants at the rate of 30%, 50%, and 75% of the cost of its cultivation, in regard to the availability and status of the market as per the guidelines in which the scheme operates.

ABOUT VENUE

Zurich is the ideal location to explore the nearby Alps because it is at the northeastern tip of Switzerland.However, the lively city itself has a lot to offer.Switzerland's financial center is much more than just a haven for bankers - it also has trendy industrialism and old-world charm.After all, there is a reason why it is ranked as one of the world's most liveable cities.It not only makes an excellent starting point from which to explore some of Switzerland's most popular tourist destinations, but it also has some of the country's best schools.

It is also ideal for sampling the best of Swiss cuisine and the local drinking culture from a social perspective.All of this, in addition to the city's clean streets, makes it a very appealing location for expats to settle in.

Zurich is a lively city with numerous activities and attractions:activities, excursions, hikes, sights, museums, tours, restaurants—from fine dining to street food—and, of course, shopping in the Old Town, Bahnhofstrasse, or Viadukt.The largest city in Switzerland has fun things to do both indoors and outdoors, both in the winter and summer and in the months in between.
