MARKET ANALYSIS

In 2016, the global nanomedicine market was estimated to be USD 138.8 billion. Technological advancements and related applications in early disease diagnosis, preventive intervention, and chronic and acute disease prevention are expected to drive the growth of this market. Nanotechnology involves the miniaturization of larger structures and chemicals on the nanoscale, which greatly changes drug delivery and affects the adoption of this technology in 2025.

The expected development of nanorobots is expected to generate potential in the market due to increased funding from government organizations. The nanorobot engineering project attempts to target cancer cells without affecting the surrounding tissues, and is expected to promote progress until 2025.

ABOUT VENUE

London is the capital and largest city of both England and the United Kingdom.It is located on the Thames River in south-east England, at the head of a 50-mile (80-kilometer) estuary that leads to the North Sea,and has been a major settlement for two millennia. The ancient core and financial centre of London, the City of London, was founded by the Romans as Londinium and retains mediaeval boundaries. Since the nineteenth century, "London" has also referred to the metropolitan area surrounding this core, historically divided between the counties of Middlesex, Essex, Surrey, Kent, and Hertfordshire. The City of Westminster, to the west of the City of London, has housed the national government for centuries.

London, as one of the world's global cities, wields significant influence in the arts, commerce, education, entertainment, fashion, finance, health care, media, tourism, and communications, and is thus sometimes referred to as the world's capital. Its GDP makes it the largest urban economy in Europe, and it is one of the world's major financial centres. It had the second-highest number of ultra-high-net-worth individuals in Europe after Paris in 2019 and the second-highest number of billionaires of any city in Europe after Moscow. It has the highest concentration of higher education institutions in Europe, with Imperial College London specialising in natural and applied sciences, the London School of Economics specialising in social sciences, and the comprehensive University College London. The city has the most 5-star hotels of any city on the planet.

The Tower of London, Kew Gardens, the combined Palace of Westminster, Westminster Abbey, and St Margaret's Church, and the historic settlement of Greenwich, where the Royal Observatory, Greenwich is a World Heritage Site in London that defines the Prime Meridian (0° longitude) and Greenwich Mean Time. Buckingham Palace, the London Eye, Piccadilly Circus, St Paul's Cathedral, Tower Bridge, and Trafalgar Square are also notable landmarks. It is home to a plethora of museums, galleries, libraries, and sporting venues, including the British Museum, National Gallery, Natural History Museum, Tate Modern, British Library, and West End theatres. The London Underground is the world's oldest rapid transit system.
