Market Analysis

PULSUS
WWW.PULSUSCONFERENCE.COM

Neurological rehabilitation is one of the branches of neurology. Disabilities like severe spinal injury or brain damage, the patient and their families' abilities, life style, and projects, are suddenly shattered. Rehabilitation is a process of education of the disabled person with the goal of assisting that individual to cope with family, friends, work, and leisure as independently as possible. It leads to encouraging them to rebuild self-esteem and a positive mood. It should be Holistic, Patient-focused, Inclusive, Participatory, Sparing, Lifelong, Resolving and community-focused. There are three main areas in Neurorehabilitation are Intermediate care, Acute Rehabilitation, and Occupational Rehabilitation. Development in neuroimaging techniques enhanced the scope and outcome of neurorehabilitation. Now, scientists are using technology with neurorehabilitation to provide cutting-edge improvements to therapies for patients with nervous system issues and robotics in neurorehabilitation is becoming more and more common. It offers patients who have strokes, other brain or spinal cord injuries the option of training and physical therapy, thus shortening the recovery period.
