Proteomics is complete set of proteins which are the building block of Aminoacids. It plays a predominant role in living organisms, with many functions .Proteomics is the next step in the study of biological systems. It is more complicated than genomics because an organism's genome is more or less constant, whereas the proteome differs from cell to cell and from time to time. Distinct genes are expressed in different cell types, which means that even the basic set of proteins that are produced in a cell needs to be identified.In its present state, it is dependent on decades of technological and instrumental developments. These developments have included advances in mass spectrometry (MS) technology, protein fractionation techniques, bioinformatics, etc.Most proteomic discoveries and efforts to date have been mainly directed towards the areas of cancer research, drug and drug target discovery and biomarker research.
