MARKET ANALYSIS

The global market for stroke disorders and treatments is rapidly expanding. The increasing number of people with high blood pressure is a major factor driving the growth of stroke disorder and treatment. Ischemic stroke is caused by a disruption in the blood supply to the brain caused by emboli, thrombus, or atherosclerosis in the cerebral arteries. According to the World Health Organization (WHO), approximately 17 million people die each year as a result of cardiovascular diseases. According to the Centres for Disease Control and Prevention, ischemic strokes account for approximately 87% of all strokes. Furthermore, stroke kills one out of every twenty people and costs the United States approximately $34 billion per year. Higher stroke mortality rates highlight the urgent need for new drugs and diagnostic tools.

Large patient pools and a concerning rise in the population at a higher risk of developing stroke in the near future are the two major factors driving the growth of the acute ischemic stroke diagnosis and treatment market. The rising prevalence of diabetes, as well as heavy tobacco users and an ageing population, are significant factors influencing market growth...

ABOUT VENUE

Paris is one of the most beautiful cities in the world. It is known worldwide for the Louvre Museum, Notre-Dame cathedral, and the Eiffel tower. It has a reputation of being a romantic and cultural city. The city is also known for its high-quality gastronomy and the terraces of its cafés.

For centuries Paris has been one of the world's most important and attractive cities. It is appreciated for the opportunities it offers for business and commerce, for study, for culture, and for entertainment; its gastronomy, haute couture, painting, literature, and intellectual community especially enjoy an enviable reputation. Its sobriquet "the City of Light" ("la Ville Lumière"), earned during the Enlightenment, remains appropriate, for Paris has retained its importance as a centre for education and intellectual pursuits.

Paris is not only the political and cultural capital of France but also its major financial and commercial centre. Despite some pockets of poverty, it is a very wealthy city, home to many vast private fortunes, both French and foreign. It serves as the base for numerous international business concerns, and even if large French firms have their manufacturing plants in the provinces, they nearly all keep their headquarters in Paris, conveniently close to the major banks and key ministries. Greater Paris does still contain a significant portion of French manufacturing concerns, but as an industrial centre the Île-de-France region is less dominant in France than it was in its heyday in the 1930s. Today more than four-fifths of the region's workforce is employed in the services sector, notably in business services and public- and private-sector administration and commerce. This proportion is even higher in the city of Paris itself. As a whole, the region is characterized by an above-average concentration of senior management and administrative and research personnel.
