MARKET ANALYSIS

The global wind energy market is expected to grow at a steady pace in the coming years, driven by increasing demand for renewable energy and the declining cost of wind power generation. According to a report by Grand View Research, the global wind energy market was valued at USD 127.14 billion in 2020 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 7.4% from 2021 to 2028.

The onshore wind energy segment accounted for the largest share of the global wind energy market in 2020, with a market size of USD 97.52 billion, or 76.7% of the total market. The offshore wind energy segment is expected to grow at a faster pace, with a CAGR of 14.5% from 2021 to 2028, driven by the increasing number of offshore wind farms and the development of larger wind turbines.

Geographically, Asia Pacific is the largest wind energy market, accounting for 46.6% of the total market in 2020. China is the largest market in the region, with a market size of USD 57.22 billion in 2020, followed by India and Japan. Europe is the second-largest market, with a market size of USD 38.54 billion in 2020, followed by North America.

The wind energy market is highly competitive, with a large number of players operating in the market. Some of the key players in the market include Vestas Wind Systems A/S, Siemens Gamesa Renewable Energy, General Electric Company, Goldwind Science & Technology Co. Ltd., and Nordex SE.

Global wind energy market is expected to grow at a healthy pace in the coming years, driven by increasing demand for renewable energy and favorable government policies. The onshore wind energy segment is expected to continue to dominate the market, while the offshore wind energy segment is expected to grow at a faster pace. Asia Pacific is the largest market for wind energy, with China as the largest market in the region. In addition to wind energy, other renewable energy sources such as solar, hydro, geothermal, and biomass are also expected to experience strong growth. The market for energy storage systems is also expected to grow rapidly, as renewable energy sources become a larger part of the energy mix and grid integration becomes more challenging.
