The Power of Intention:
Tapping into it and Staying in the Flow

Have you noticed how intention affects your work and the outcome? How some sessions seem substantially more successful than others, even though you are using the same methods? How do we tap into intention and remain in its flow through the course of the treatment plan? I have a checklist I will share with you on how to set the intention and stay within the flow of that intention, to provide those seeking your service, maximum results.

Beginning with clear communication on the intended purpose of seeking your services, provides the solid ground for you to shape your plan into place. From there, I will share what I have found successful to be sure we are both checked into that flow, things to look for and tools that can be used. I will also discuss methods I have learned to help a client who is resistant to allowing the adjustments within their body and the commitment to the flow of their "spoken" intention. I will share the steps I use and the reasons behind them, to ensure your intended purposes are fulfilled. I have found the difference is extraordinary, when this is followed and intention is aligned.

There is an abundance of data, in science, medicine, and spirituality, on the field of intention and the force it has universally. Let's share the experience together, of tapping into that force, and elevating our work beyond our wildest dreams!
