About London

The London Natural History Society suggest that London is “one of the World’s Greenest Cities” with more than 40 percent green space or open water. They indicate that 2000 species of flowering plant have been found growing there and that the tidal Thames supports 120 species of fish. The City of London is a city and county that contains the historic centre and central business district of London. The City is a major business and financial centre. The City has a resident population of 9,401 (ONS estimate, mid-2016) but over 300,000 people commute to and work there. About three quarters of the jobs in the City of London are in the financial, professional, and associated business services sectors. The City has an oceanic climate modified by the Urban Heat Island in the centre of London. The City vies with New York City as the financial capital of the world; many banking and insurance institutions have their headquarters there. The London Stock Exchange (shares and bonds), Lloyd’s of London (insurance) and the Bank of England are all based in the City. London is the world’s greatest foreign exchange market, with much of the trade conducted in the City of London.

It’s no secret that London is one of the most incredible cities in the world to live and work in. If you are thinking of moving there, we’ve come up with 10 reasons why it is such a great place for its inhabitants… not that you’ll need any more reasons!

London was recently voted as the world’s most desired place in the world to work, beating cities such as New York and Paris to the top spot. It’s not surprising though, as it’s the home of so many global companies offering unique opportunities to their employees.

With over 300 different languages spoken in London, and London being recognized as the world’s most visited city, it’s fair to say that the UK’s capital is one of the most culturally diverse cities in the entire world.
