About Rome

Rome is the capital of Italy and the largest and most populous city in the country. It covers an area of 1,285 square kilometres and has nearly 3 million residents. Rome is also the largest of the 8,101 communes in Italy. According to legend, the city of Rome was founded by Romulus and Remus, who were left to die as babies and were rescued and suckled by a she-wolf. It seems to have been established sometime around the 8th century BC. Since then, Rome has played a dominant role in history for two years. It was the capital of the Roman Kingdom, the Roman Republic and the Roman Empire. It became the seat of the papacy until the unification of Italy in 1870. Rome then became the capital of the Kingdom of Italy, and after the abolition of the monarchy in 1946, it became the capital of the Italian Republic.

Julius Caesar The lasting power of Rome has been, in part, to its geographical position in the world. Located at the centre of the Mediterranean Sea, located on the River Tiber, a few miles from the sea. Rome was ruled by seven kings between 753 BC and 510 BC. Foundations of Roman Civilization were established. Although the king's powers were absolute, he was appointed by the Senate, which was patricians of the city. Each Patrician headed to a group of Clients who worked for him. The rest of society were categorized as Plebeians or Plebs who were the common people.

Rome is the most visited city in the world. The historic centre of Rome is a Unesco World Heritage Site 4 million visitors a year flock to the Italian capital to experience some of the most historic and cultural sites in the world. Rome is truly one of the great cities of the world. Rich in history, beauty and culture, it has been an inspiration to countless generations of visitors. Even now, after nearly three thousand years, its appeal and charm are as strong as ever. Every year, you can be sure that they will not be disappointed.
