Market Analysis of Liver and Hepatitis

The global hepatitis therapeutics market size was projected at USD 19.6 billion in 2016, and is predicted to grow at a CAGR of 2.7% during the forecast period. Few prominent factors that are expected to boost the market are growing prevalence of viral hepatitis, rise in the number of autoimmune disease, and surge in healthcare expenditures across the globe. In 2015, approximately 1.34 million people died due to this condition globally. This number is considerably high to be compared with the number of deaths caused by HIV and tuberculosis.

However, the number of deaths owing to HIV and tuberculosis are declining, while rate of deaths owing to viral hepatitis is witnessing an upward trend. This condition is the inflammation of liver tissue caused due to excessive alcohol consumption, medication errors, viral infection, autoimmune diseases, toxins, and nonalcoholic steatohepatitis. According to the WHO, nearly 1.4 million people die every year globally due to this disease and approximately 400 million people are infected with at least one form of hepatitis.

The others segment covers the market estimates for hepatitis D and E, which occur rarely compared to the other three conditions. According to the estimates of WHO, approximately 90% of children in developing economies have been infected with the virus before reaching the 10 years of age owing to poor hygiene & sanitary conditions.

The introduction of generic versions of HCV drugs has changed the market dynamics across the world. With more number of people being able to afford the generic versions, the usage rates of its drugs are expected to grow rapidly over the next few years.

Host City

With the 1873 unification of Buda, Pest and Obuda the city of Budapest was officially created. It is the capital, the most populous city of Hungary and the tenth largest European Union. With a unique, youthful atmosphere, a world-class classical music scene as well as a pulsating night life increasingly appreciated among European youth and, last but not least, an exceptionally rich offering of natural thermal baths, Budapest is one of Europe's most delightful and enjoyable cities. Due to its scenic setting and its architecture it is nicknamed "Paris of the East". Budapest is served by Budapest Ferenc Liszt International Airport (BUD) one of the busiest airports in Central and Eastern Europe, located 16 kilometers (9.9 mi) east-southeast of the center of Budapest Budapest has a borderline humid continental climate, with relatively cold winters and warm summers. Budapest has architecturally noteworthy buildings in a wide range of styles and from distinct time periods. The city is a major center for banking and finance, real estate, retailing, trade, transportation, tourism, new media as well as traditional media, advertising, legal services, accountancy, insurance, fashion and the arts in Hungary and regionally. Budapest is home not only to almost all national institutions and government agencies, but also to many domestic and international companies. Budapest has an Excellent Public Transportation. It also has wide variety of Good valued accommodation which also attracts Children and for adults it has vivid night life, thriving food scene, Budapest is cheap. In most other cities tourists would need to shell out way more for the quality of food, drinks, live music, and accommodation which is offered in Budapest.
