About Paris

Paris is the capital and the most populous city of France. It has an area of 105 square kilometers and a population in 2013 of 2,229,621 within the administrative limits. The city is both a commune and department, and forms the centre and headquarters of the Paris Region, which has an area of 12,012 square kilometers and a population in 2014 of 12,005,077, comprising 18.2 percent of the population of France.

Paris is the hub of the national road network and is surrounded by three orbital roads: the Peripherique, the A86 motorway, and the Francilienne motorway. Among Paris's important museums and cultural institutions are the most visited art museum in the world, the Louvre, as well as the Musee d'Orsay, noted for its collection of French Impressionist art, and the Musée National d'Art Moderne in the Pompidou Centre, the largest collection of modern and contemporary art in Europe.

The central area of the city along the Seine River is classified as a UNESCO Heritage Site, and includes many notable monuments, including Notre Dame Cathedral (12th century to 13th century); the Sainte-Chapelle (13th century); the Eiffel Tower (1889); the Grand Palais and Petit Palais (1900); and the Basilica of Sacré-Coeur on Montmartre (1914). In 2015 Paris received 22.2 million visitors, making it one of the world's top tourist destinations and is also known for its fashion, particularly the twice-yearly Paris Fashion Week, and for its haute cuisine, and three-star restaurants. Most of France's major universities and grandes écoles are located in Paris, as are France's major newspapers, including Le Monde, Le Figaro, and Liberation.

Climate

Paris has a typical Western European oceanic climate which is affected by the North Atlantic Current. The overall climate throughout the year is mild and moderately wet. October is a very cool time of year to visit Paris, France, when the weather can be cold and wet. At this time of year, the average temperature starts off at 14°C on October 1st and drops down to 9.5°C by October 31st.
