ABOUT BARCELONA

Barcelona is the capital city of Catalonia, which is a region of Spain. Barcelona is the largest city on the Mediterranean coast. The origin of Barcelona is unclear. The ruins of an early settlement have been found dating to earlier than 5000 BC.

The city is between the rivers of Llobregat and Besòs, and south of the Pyrenees mountains. It has a humid subtropical climate . Most rain falls in autumn and spring, and the least rain falls in winter and summer. The average rainfall is relatively low, due to the rain shadow from the mountains.

In 1992, Barcelona hosted the Summer Olympic Games. Many new parks were opened and other significant changes to the city were made. One example is opening the new beaches in the PobleNou area. Barcelona is home to football team F.C. Barcelona. The city is very religious, so there are many cathedrals in it. The most famous of them is Sagrada Familia.
