The U.S. market for reproductive management products is large and robust, estimated at more than $3.7 billion in 2013. This market, which includes a broad range of contraceptive drugs, contraceptive devices/implants, and fertility drugs, is expected to expand at a healthy compound annual growth rate of more than 7%, increasing by more than $1.5 billion over a span of 5 years.

The U.S. market for reproductive management products will also benefit from continued strong demand for easier-to-use, highly effective fertility drugs, as well as the introduction of new technologies, which are expected to enhance assisted reproductive technology and further improve pregnancy rates and decrease potential side effects.

Market analysis:

Overall, the U.S. market for reproductive management products will continue to benefit from the stability and growth of the aging female population in the U.S., which continues to postpone or refrain from childbearing and demand access to highly effective contraceptives and fertility drugs.

About Chicago

Chicago is the third-most populous city in the United States. With over 2.7 million residents, it is also the most populous city in both the state of Illinois and the Midwestern United States. It is the county seat of Cook County. The Chicago metropolitan area, often referred to as Chicago land, has nearly 10 million people and is the third-largest in the U.S. Chicago has been called a global architecture capital. In terms of wealth and economy, Chicago is considered one of the most important business centres in the world. The city has many nicknames, the best-known being the Windy City

Chicago was incorporated as a city in 1837, near a portage between the Great Lakes and the Mississippi River watershed. O'Hare International Airport is the second-busiest airport in the world when measured by aircraft traffic; the region also has the largest number of U.S. highways and rail road freight. In 2012, Chicago was listed as an alpha global city by the Globalization and World Cities Research Network, and ranked seventh in the world in the 2016 Global Cities Index. Chicago has the third-largest gross metropolitan product in the United States about $640 billion according to 2015 estimates. The city has one of the world's largest and most diversified economies with no single industry employing more than 14% of the workforce.
