About Oslo, Norway

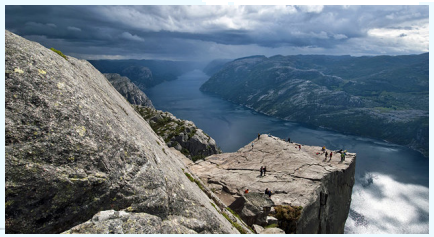

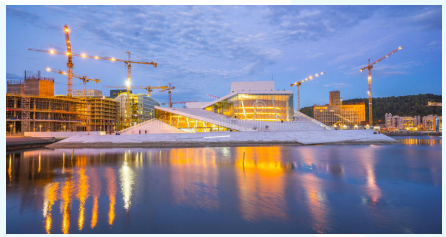

Oslo is a modern and diverse city, and each district has its own personality. The city is packed with museums and cultural highlights. We like to call ourselves a real festival city, and can tempt with everything from music festivals to food festivals and children's festivals. Music is an important part of Oslo, and with its thousands of concerts a year, Oslo is the city in Europe that has the most concerts per inhabitant. Oslo's port area has been reborn as a neighborhood where museums, restaurants and an urban way of life go hand in hand. No other city in Norway has as varied a restaurant offering as Oslo. Here you will find everything from exciting street food and traditional Norwegian cuisine, to world-class gourmet restaurants. More than half of Oslo, designated as Europe's environmental capital in 2019, is covered in forests and parks, making Oslo a green city in the summer and a ski resort in the winter. The compact city centre is easy to explore on foot or by bike, and an efficient public transport system makes the whole city available without a car. Our city is constantly growing - new neighborhood are appearing and old ones are being developed and transformed.
