Host City

Copenhagen is the capital and most populous city of Denmark. As of July 2018, the city has a population of 777,218 and 616,098 in Copenhagen Municipality, 103,914 in Frederiksberg Municipality, 43,005 in Tarnby Municipality, and 14,201 in Dragor Municipality. It forms the core of the wider urban area of Copenhagen in population 1,320,629 and the Copenhagen metropolitan area in population 2,057,737. Copenhagen is situated on the eastern coast of the island of Zealand; another small portion of the city is located on Amager, and it is separated from Malmö, Sweden, by the strait of Oresund. The Oresund Bridge connects the two cities by rail and road.

Originally a Viking fishing village established in the 10th century in the vicinity of what is now Gammel Strand, Copenhagen became the capital of Denmark in the early 15th century. Beginning in the 17th century it consolidated its position as a regional centre of power with its institutions, defences and armed forces. After a plague outbreak and fire in the 18th century, the city underwent a period of redevelopment. This included construction of the prestigious district of Frederiksstaden and founding of such cultural institutions as the Royal Theatre and the Royal Academy of Fine Arts. After further disasters in the early 19th century when Horatio Nelson attacked the Dano-Norwegian fleet and bombarded the city, rebuilding during the Danish Golden Age brought a Neoclassical look to Copenhagen's architecture. Later, following the Second World War, the Finger Plan fostered the development of housing and businesses along the five urban railway routes stretching out from the city centre

Vision & Plan

International Market Approach

Global endocrinology drugs market is expected to witness lucrative growth over the forecast period owing to increasing prevalence of endocrine diseases. These diseases include endocrine gland associated disorders such as Addison's disease, gigantism, goiter, Cushing's syndrome, polycystic ovary syndrome (PCOS), diabetes, hypertension, hyperlipidemia, acromegaly, thyroiditis, and osteomalacia. Rising adolescent population base which is more prone to such diseases due to hormonal imbalances also tends to drive the growth of endocrinology drugs market. Unhealthy lifestyle characteristics such as high intake of cholesterol, work stress and weight gain which ultimately leading to malfunctioning of the endocrine system, inception of new drug delivery systems, extensive research and development, and the rise in disposable income propels the growth of endocrinology drugs market. Rapid uptake of novel dosage forms and formulations of existing drugs is expected to increase number of patients for treatment of endocrine disorders thus leading to market growth.
