Yeast Market Projection

Yeast is a fermenting and leavening agent. Based on the type, yeast is segmented into baker's yeast, brewer's yeast, feed yeast, industrial yeast, bio-ethanol yeast, and wine yeast. Yeast is used in various end-use applications in the Food and Beverages, Feed and other sectors.

One key trend upcoming in this market is the growing demand for bio-ethanol as fuel because of the low availability of fossil fuel and an increase in the number of ethanol/gasoline flex-fuel cars.

The other important cause is a rise in demand for convenience food products is one of the factors contributing to the market growth. The products containing yeast reduce the cost of time associated with food consumption and increase the quantity and variety of foods consumed.

Further, the report states that one of the major challenges confronting the market is the stiff competition in the procurement of raw materials. The shortage of molasses also triggered competition among manufacturers worldwide.

Yeast Markets in the World to 2019 - Market Size, Development, and Forecasts

The expansion of the global yeast industry is forecast to reach 4.4% p.a. in the coming years. Between 2008 and 2014 the market increased with an average annual growth of 8.0%. Currently, active yeasts account for 70.2% of the global demand while inactive yeasts have a 29.8% share of the market.

Europe, China, Japan, Mexico, Turkey and the United States represent the largest yeast markets while the strongest annual growth is forecast to occur in Morocco (20.2%), Senegal (17.4%), Kenya (16.5%), Rwanda (10.1%) and Bolivia (9.0%).

Yeast Markets based on Types

Global baker's yeast market: The baker’s yeast market is expected to grow at a CAGR of close to 9% during the forecast period. The growth of the global baker's yeast market is directly linked to the increasing consumption of processed food, especially bakery items.
