Title: Healthcare and Technology in the New Millennia

Abstract (300 word limit)

Designed and built to be a hospital of the future, Farrer Park Hospital (FPH) is Singapore's newest private healthcare service provider to integrate innovation and the latest technology for optimal patient outcomes and comfort. Having garnered over 30 awards since operations in 2016, FPH has pushed the boundaries in care delivery.

FPH is Asia's only fully integrated facility encompassing a 250 bedded 5 star hotel, 188 units medical centre and a 220 bedded hospital. Conceptualized as a SMART hospital, FPH's infrastructure was built for seamless information flow throughout the complex. Integrating platforms and systems to enable efficient information to improve patient safety, operation efficiency and effective decision making.

Building a culture that embraces fresh solutions is also critical to the development of a SMART facility. People, not tech must be at the heart of healthcare. Technology is the enabler and must never be allowed to front the care that is provided. SMART Nursing, AI, analytics, the software and hardware surrounds, supports and enable people to deliver superior care to patients.

Find out more about FPH's journey. How the innovations translates to value for stakeholders and how as a small tertiary acute facility, carved a niche to become a leading smart hospital.
