Title: The Netizen: Gearing the World towards Global Society

Jayson Troy F. Bajar
Central Philippine University

Abstract

The Internet spawned the era of the information age of the histories. It has paved the way for major technological advancements which ushered the world into another phase of industrial revolution – the digital outbreak. With the internet, we have transformed our identities and even assumed our alter-ego in the virtual platform, as a netizen. Internet served as an arena to contest for political beliefs, question socially accepted norms, and a stage for social movements. In fact, significant changes in the recent history were driven by the internet. People around the world have witnessed how the internet persistently and rapidly geared the world into incessant evolution. The relevance of the institutions of the modern society is now challenged. Internet has shaken the political, social, economic, and the ideological status quo. Consequentially, people came to discover congregations in the virtual world. This eventually led to the formulation of global values that brought man at the cross road of another era that will spawn soon enough – the establishment of the global society. It will be fellowship of men which knows no boundaries and everyone is acknowledged as part of one global family.
