Experimental Agile in Telecoms

We're going to tell the story of how moving away from traditional agile frameworks has enabled us to get closer to our customers. Built around the key tenant that every problem if based around a human need either physical or emotional. By getting as close as possible to our customers we can quickly experiment with them to determine what they truly want and need. Happy customers and potential customer in turn drives revenue and enables business goals.