About Destination Paris

Paris is the capital and most prevalent city of France, with an area of 105 square kilometres and an authorized estimated population of 2,140,526 residents as of 1 January 2019. Since the 17th century, Paris became one of Europe's major centres of finance, diplomacy, commerce, fashion, science, and the arts.

The great city Paris is the centre and seat of government of Paris Region, which has an estimated official 2019 population of 12,213,364, or about 18 percent of the population of France. The Paris Region had a GDP of €681 billion (US$850 billion) in 2016, accounting for 31 percent of the GDP of France, and was the 5th largest region by GDP in the world. The city is a main railway, highway, and air-transport centre assisted by two international airports: Paris-Charles de Gaulle (the second busiest airport in Europe) and Paris-Orlay. Opened in 1900, the city's subway system, the Paris Metro and is the second busiest metro system in Europe after Moscow Metro.

Paris is the centre of a burst of philosophic and scientific activity, known as the Age of Enlightenment. Paris was the financial capital of continental Europe, the main European centre of book publishing and fashion and the production of fine furniture and luxury goods.

The three main portions of historical Paris are defined by the Seine. At its centre is the Île de la Cité, which is the seat of religious and temporal authority. The Seine's Left Bank (Rive Gauche) has conventionally been the seat of intellectual life, and its Right Bank (Rive Droite) comprises the heart of the city's economic life, but the distinctions have become blurred in recent decades
